12. Liabilities

12.1 The Client agrees to be liable for all damages and any expenses which may occur to the Company arising from or relating to this Agreement, any action or refraining from doing any action of the Client or Client's agent as well as all damages or any expenses which may incur to the Company arising from or relating to claim or legal disputes made by other third party against the Company under this Agreement, provided that such damages or expenses shall not be a course of action or refraining from doing any action of the Company, the Company's officers or employees, either willfully or negligently, in any manner.

12.2 In case of force majeure, emergency, or any other interruption incurred to the Company's computer system, the Client agrees that the Company may undertake to place Client's Purchase Order or Sale Order through its Networking Company in order to match Purchase Order or Sale Order in Derivatives Exchange accordingly.

12.3 The Client agrees that the Company shall not be liable for any loss and/or damages incurred to the Client in case of fire, storm, strike, chaos, protest, war, control by governmental action and false or mistake relating to communication network system or delay derived from third party or the Company's communication network, electricity or electric device interruption, or any other force majeure that affect the Company's business operation, provided, however, that such damages shall not be caused by willful or material negligent action of the Company, the Company's officers or employees.

13. Risk Factors

The Client is informed by the Company that the Derivatives Trading is a transaction involving high risks due to the fluctuation of price of Derivatives and Goods or Variables derived from potential changes or amendment of Relevant Regulations as well as the change of tax and duties. Furthermore, the Derivatives Trading involves a minimal amount of Initial Margin compared to the value of the Purchase Order or Sale Order. A slight change or fluctuation of price of the Derivatives may impact the value or amount of Client's Margin or the Client may even be required to put additional Margin for the different amount which may have both good and bad impact on the Client.

The Derivatives Trading, therefore, may cause the Client to lose his/her Initial Margin and all additional Margin. In case where the change or fluctuation of price of the Derivatives adversely affects Client's position or additional Margin is required, the Client may be requested to deposit additional Margin in order to maintain the status of the Derivatives. Should the Client fail to deposit additional Margin so requested within the specified period, Client's Derivatives may be close out and that the Client shall be responsible for any lost amount.

14. Governing Law and Legal Disputes

This Agreement shall be governed by the Laws of the Kingdom of Thailand. In case of legal disputes between the Company and the Client arising from or relating to the Derivatives Trading under this Agreement, at the requests of the Client, The Company agrees to solve the legal disputes by submitting a complaint to the Office of the SEC in order for such legal dispute to be settled by the Arbitration in accordance with the criteria and procedures as prescribed under Relevant Regulations.

15. Sovereignty

In the event any part of this Agreement is or shall be in contradiction to the applicable law or shall become invalid because of legal reasons, the remaining part of the Agreement shall stay in force and the invalid part shall be legally replaced under consideration of the intentions of the parties at the time of conclusion of this Agreement.

The parties hereto have read and understood the contents hereof including the Risk Disclosure Statement and Future and Option Fact Sheet and have hereunder affixed their signature in the presence of witness on _____. The Client acknowledged that the Company shall provide a duplicated copy to Client upon their request.

Futures

Futures is a contract between a buyer (Long Position) and a seller (Short Position) in which gives the holder the obligation to make or take delivery under the terms of the contract, The buyer believes that the price of underlying commodity or variable will increase. If the price increases, the buyer will get unlimited profit and vice versa. The seller believes that the price of underlying commodity or variable will decrease. If the price decreases, the seller will get unlimited profit and vice versa as well.

Options

Options is a contract written by a seller (Short Position) that conveys to the buyer (Long Position) the right – but not the obligation – to buy (Call Options) or to sell (Put Options) a particular asset. In return for granting the option, the seller collects a payment (Premium) from the buyer.

The buyer will lose not more than the amount of the premium paid while the seller will profit from the amount of premium received but has an obligation to make or take delivery under the terms of the contract. The seller must put the margin as stipulated by TFEX (Thailand Futures Exchange) and FI Club (Futures Industry Club) and the potential loss is unlimited.

Margin

Margin requirements are calculated based on a risk-based calculation methodology which considers the maximum one day risk on all the positions of client account (Futures & Options) as stipulated by TCH (Thailand Clearing House). Margin requirement for each product will follow announcement of the company. For any changes of the notifications, rules or regulations, additional products, exchange fees and margin requirement by TFEX and TCH, the clients can refer to the company's website. (www.poems.in.th)

Margin Call:

- 1.) In case equity balance (EB) falls below the maintenance margin (MM) requirements, but stays above the forced close margin (FM) levels, the client is not allowed to open a new contract position and is required to top up collateral to restore it back to the initial margin (IM) requirements by 15:00 hrs of the following trading day (T+1)

- 2.) If the client fails to top up collateral within the specified period of time, the company will force close their positions in part or in whole by 12.30 hrs of the next trading day (T+2) to maintain their collateral levels to meet the initial margin (IM) requirements, which are calculated at the end of T or T+1, whichever is higher.
- 3.) The client must bear the risk of the possible loss, which may be higher than the whole amount of collateral placed by the client. The client must pay such amount to the company within the following trading day.
- 4.) If the value of the collateral on T+1 rises until the value of force closeout narrows, the company will use the amount at the end of T+1 to force close the positions on T+2, but the client is required to top up collateral equal to the reduced amount of the force closeout value on T+2, or otherwise the client may not be allowed to create new positions.

Intra – day Force Close – out :

- 1.) In case equity balance (EB) falls below the forced close margin (FM) levels during trading hours, the company may issue a margin call to the client to top up collateral or force close his/her positions in part or in whole to keep the collateral levels to meet the maintenance margin (MM) requirements.
- 2.) The client must restore the levels back to meet the MM requirements within one hour upon notice by the company, or before the market close, whichever is shorter.
- 3.) If the client fails to top up collateral or close out his/her positions in part or in whole within the specified period of time, the company will force close his/her positions in part or in whole within that trading day (T).
- 4.) The client must bear the risk of all loss arisen, which may be higher than the whole amount of collateral placed by the client. The client must pay such amount to the company within the following trading day.

Date _____

Phillip Securities (Thailand) Public Company Limited who is a derivatives agent, hereby certify that () Mr. () Ms. () Mrs. _____ who is working for us has explained and informed the Client being () Mr. () Ms. () Mrs. () Others _____ so as to be aware of the risks relating to futures and/or options trading prior to opening the trading account or trading the futures and/or options on behalf of the Client as follows:

1. FUTURES

1.1 Nature of Futures

Futures is a contract in which parties are bound to perform their obligations thereunder. Unless a party is able to offset its position before the settlement date, the seller of futures is obliged to make and the buyer is obliged to take delivery of the underlying asset of the contract (physical delivery), or a party may make cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the other party.

1.2 Risk of Loss in Trading Futures

In futures trading, buyers (a party with long position) and sellers (a party with short position) are required to make an initial margin deposit with their derivatives agent to secure their performance under Futures. Since the amount of initial margin is small compared to the contract's value, a relatively small movement of the market can lead to either large losses or gains within a short period of time. The Client may sustain losses significantly beyond the amount of initial margin deposit it has made or may be called upon by its agent to liquidate its position at a loss should it be unable to provide additional margin funds within a specified period.

2. OPTIONS

2.1 Nature of Options

Options is a contract in which the seller gives the buyer the right to buy or sell the underlying asset at a fixed price within a specified period of time and conditions, or the right to receive payment from the seller under the conditions specified in the contract. The buyer is required to pay a premium to the seller in exchange for such right to buy or sell. Options which grants the buyer the right to buy an underlying asset or variable at a fixed price is a call options while options which grants the buyer the right to sell an underlying asset or variable at a fixed price is a put options. Such right must be exercised according to the terms and conditions specified in the Options. When the buyer exercises his options, the seller may make physical delivery of the underlying asset or make cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer.

2.2 Risk of Loss from Options Trading

A buyer of options may choose to offset his position or exercise the options or can simply allow the options to lapse. If the Client chooses to exercise the options, he /she will receive a cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer. Otherwise the Client may choose to make or take delivery of the underlying asset (physical delivery) where it will receive payment of or pay for the underlying asset delivered or taken at the exercise price specified under the contract. If options expire worthless, the buyer's loss equals the amount of premium.

A seller (writer) of options receives premium from a buyer and is bound to perform his obligation should the buyer exercise the options. The seller is required to make margin deposit. Upon the buyer's exercise of options, the seller who does not offset his position is required to either make the cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer, or make or take delivery of the underlying asset (physical delivery) where he will receive payment of or pay for the underlying asset delivered or taken at the exercise price specified under the contract. If options expire worthless, the seller's gain equals the amount of premium.

Due to the fact that the maximum loss of a buyer of options is limited to the premium, he/she is to pay the premium but is not required to make margin deposit. On the other hand, the seller's losses can be unlimited therefore he is required to make margin deposit with a derivatives agent to secure his/her performance under the options similar to the case of futures trading. With an unfavourable movement in the market against his/her position, a seller of options may sustain a loss well in excess of the amount of margin deposit made within a relatively short period of time.

3. ADDITIONAL RISKS AND OTHER INFORMANTON CONCERNING FUTURES AND OPTIONS TRADING

3.1 Understanding Terms and Conditions of Derivatives

Since derivatives trading carries a high degree of risk, therefore, prior to making investment decisions, the Client should carefully study and understand each category of contract specifications, including, but not limited to, type of underlying assets and variables, contract size/unit/multiplier, last trading day, settlement day, delivery or settlement method, and the delivery or reference price used to determine settlement price and margin requirements. The Client should consider if the investment is suitable for his/ her investment purpose and financial status or not. With respect to trading options, the Client should also understand other relevant terms and conditions, including type of options, e.g. put options or call options, exercise conditions, type of underlying assets and variables, etc. The Client should consider if the investment is suitable for his/her investment purpose and the risk exposure is acceptable or not. The Client should also consider a potential of return on acquiring a position, amount of premium and transaction fees and possible losses.

3.2 Fees on Derivatives Trading

Prior to trading, the Client should obtain from his/her derivatives agent clear explanation of all fees and other charges for which it will be liable relating to trading, settlement or exercise of options, e.g. commission, exercise fee, etc. These charges add to the Client's investment costs and will affect loss and gain as well as the Client's investment decision. Commission may vary depending on type and volume of transactions. The Thailand Futures Exchange Plc and the Office of the Securities and Exchange Commission prescribe no regulation on commission rates.

3.3 Risk of Liquidating Position and Liabilities for Resulting Loss

When the Client establishes certain positions on derivatives, i.e. long futures, short futures and short options, he/she is obliged to perform its obligations under the contract. The Client's Derivatives with such position will be marked to market by its derivative agent at least at the end of business day to reflect a daily gain or loss from the Client's position.

Should the loss sustained by the Client's position in the market cause the balance in its margin account to drop below the maintenance margin, the Client will be called by his/her derivatives agent to deposit an additional fund to maintain its initial margin within a specified period of time. If the Client does not provide the required margin within the time required by his/her derivatives agent, the Client's position may be liquidated, and the Client will be liable for any resulting loss from such liquidation.

The derivatives agent may also include Forced Close Position as an additional term in a Contract Appointing Derivatives Brokerage or its trading regulation that is when the Client's balance in its margin account drops to the Forced Close Level, the derivatives agent will call the Client to deposit additional margin during trading hours.

If the Client does not provide the required margin within the time set out in the agreement or the regulation, the derivative agent is entitled to close out the Client's position, and the Client will be liable for any resulting loss from such Forced Close Position. Clients who maintain a position in derivatives, whether for their own account or through third party, in excess of the amount determined by the Derivatives Exchange and are unable to offset such excessive position as informed by their derivatives agents will be exposed to the similar foregoing risk.

3.4 Risk Associated with Failure to Offset Position

Should the client be unable to offset its derivatives position before the settlement date due to unfavourable market conditions, e.g. illiquidity, trading halt in the market, and etc, the Client may sustain a loss due to its outstanding position in Derivatives at settlement date.

3.5 Risk Associated with Failure to Execute Stop Loss Order

A derivatives agent may not be able to execute some types of orders, such as 'stop-loss' or 'stop-limit' orders, placed by the Client to limit his/her losses, since market conditions at the time the order is placed may make it impossible to match such orders.

3.6 Risk from Position Restriction or Prohibition

The Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission may order derivatives agents to restrict or prohibit a client from acquiring further position, to close its trading accounts or to liquidate his/her position if the client's derivatives transactions have or may have affected the integrity of derivatives trading in the Derivatives Exchange, or have or may have caused the price of derivatives traded in the Derivatives Exchange to be inconsistent with the normal market condition, or are inappropriate or may violate the law governing derivatives; or if the client fails, upon request of the Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission, to inform or provide information, or gives false or misleading explanation or information to its derivative agent, the Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Office of Securities and Exchange Commission may also order the Derivatives Exchange or the Clearing House to suspend trading or restrict or liquidate position of clients where it is necessary to maintain the stability of the financial and economic system of the country, or to maintain the stability of the trading and settlement system of the derivatives market.

The seller must put the margin as stipulated by TFEX (Thailand Futures Exchange) and FI Club (Futures Industry Club) and the potential loss is unlimited.

Margin

Margin requirements are calculated based on a risk-based calculation methodology which considers the maximum one day risk on all the positions of client account (Futures & Options) as stipulated by TCH (Thailand Clearing House). Margin requirement for each product will follow announcement of the company. - 2.) If the client fails to top up collateral within the specified period of time, the company will force close their positions in part or in whole by 12.30 hrs of the next trading day (T+2) to maintain their collateral levels to meet the initial margin (IM) requirements, which are calculated at the end of T or T+1, whichever is higher.
- 3.) The client must bear the risk of the possible loss, which may be higher than the whole amount of collateral placed by the client. The client must pay such amount to the company within the following trading day.
- 4.) If the value of the collateral on T+1 rises until the value of force closeout narrows, the company will use the amount at the end of T+1 to force close the positions on T+2, but the client is required to top up collateral equal to the reduced amount of the force closeout value on T+2, or otherwise the client may not be allowed to create new positions.

Intra – day Force Close – out :

- 1.) In case equity balance (EB) falls below the forced close margin (FM) levels during trading hours, the company may issue a margin call to the client to top up collateral or force close his/her positions in part or in whole to keep the collateral levels to meet the maintenance margin (MM) requirements.
- 2.) The client must restore the levels back to meet the MM requirements within one hour upon notice by the company, or before the market close, whichever is shorter.

Phillip Securities (Thailand) Public Company Limited who is a derivatives agent, hereby certify that () Mr. () Ms. () Mrs. _____ who is working for us has explained and informed the Client being () Mr. () Ms. () Mrs. () Others _____ so as to be aware of the risks relating to futures and/or options trading prior to opening the trading account or trading the futures and/or options on behalf of the Client as follows:

1. FUTURES

1.1 Nature of Futures

Futures is a contract in which parties are bound to perform their obligations thereunder. Unless a party is able to offset its position before the settlement date, the seller of futures is obliged to make and the buyer is obliged to take delivery of the underlying asset of the contract (physical delivery), or a party may make cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the other party.

1.2 Risk of Loss in Trading Futures

In futures trading, buyers (a party with long position) and sellers (a party with short position) are required to make an initial margin deposit with their derivatives agent to secure their performance under Futures. Since the amount of initial margin is small compared to the contract's value, a relatively small movement of the market can lead to either large losses or gains within a short period of time. The Client may sustain losses significantly beyond the amount of initial margin deposit it has made or may be called upon by its agent to liquidate its position at a loss should it be unable to provide additional margin funds within a specified period.

2. OPTIONS

2.1 Nature of Options

Options is a contract in which the seller gives the buyer the right to buy or sell the underlying asset at a fixed price within a specified period of time and conditions, or the right to receive payment from the seller under the conditions specified in the contract. The buyer is required to pay a premium to the seller in exchange for such right to buy or sell. Options which grants the buyer the right to buy an underlying asset or variable at a fixed price is a call options while options which grants the buyer the right to sell an underlying asset or variable at a fixed price is a put options. Such right must be exercised according to the terms and conditions specified in the Options. When the buyer exercises his options, the seller may make physical delivery of the underlying asset or make cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer.

2.2 Risk of Loss from Options Trading

A buyer of options may choose to offset his position or exercise the options or can simply allow the options to lapse. If the Client chooses to exercise the options, he /she will receive a cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer. Otherwise the Client may choose to make or take delivery of the underlying asset (physical delivery) where it will receive payment of or pay for the underlying asset delivered or taken at the exercise price specified under the contract. If options expire worthless, the buyer's loss equals the amount of premium.

A seller (writer) of options receives premium from a buyer and is bound to perform his obligation should the buyer exercise the options. The seller is required to make margin deposit. Upon the buyer's exercise of options, the seller who does not offset his position is required to either make the cash settlement where the cash difference between the exercise price and the market value or price of the underlying asset or variable at a time or a period of time in the future as set out in the contract is paid to the buyer, or make or take delivery of the underlying asset (physical delivery) where he will receive payment of or pay for the underlying asset delivered or taken at the exercise price specified under the contract. If options expire worthless, the seller's gain equals the amount of premium.

Due to the fact that the maximum loss of a buyer of options is limited to the premium, he/she is to pay the premium but is not required to make margin deposit. On the other hand, the seller's losses can be unlimited therefore he is required to make margin deposit with a derivatives agent to secure his/her performance under the options similar to the case of futures trading. With an unfavourable movement in the market against his/her position, a seller of options may sustain a loss well in excess of the amount of margin deposit made within a relatively short period of time.

3. ADDITIONAL RISKS AND OTHER INFORMANTON CONCERNING FUTURES AND OPTIONS TRADING

3.1 Understanding Terms and Conditions of Derivatives

Since derivatives trading carries a high degree of risk, therefore, prior to making investment decisions, the Client should carefully study and understand each category of contract specifications, including, but not limited to, type of underlying assets and variables, contract size/unit/multiplier, last trading day, settlement day, delivery or settlement method, and the delivery or reference price used to determine settlement price and margin requirements. The Client should consider if the investment is suitable for his/ her investment purpose and financial status or not. With respect to trading options, the Client should also understand other relevant terms and conditions, including type of options, e.g. put options or call options, exercise conditions, type of underlying assets and variables, etc. The Client should consider if the investment is suitable for his/her investment purpose and the risk exposure is acceptable or not. The Client should also consider a potential of return on acquiring a position, amount of premium and transaction fees and possible losses.

3.2 Fees on Derivatives Trading

Prior to trading, the Client should obtain from his/her derivatives agent clear explanation of all fees and other charges for which it will be liable relating to trading, settlement or exercise of options, e.g. commission, exercise fee, etc. These charges add to the Client's investment costs and will affect loss and gain as well as the Client's investment decision. Commission may vary depending on type and volume of transactions. The Thailand Futures Exchange Plc and the Office of the Securities and Exchange Commission prescribe no regulation on commission rates.

3.3 Risk of Liquidating Position and Liabilities for Resulting Loss

When the Client establishes certain positions on derivatives, i.e. long futures, short futures and short options, he/she is obliged to perform its obligations under the contract. The Client's Derivatives with such position will be marked to market by its derivative agent at least at the end of business day to reflect a daily gain or loss from the Client's position.

Should the loss sustained by the Client's position in the market cause the balance in its margin account to drop below the maintenance margin, the Client will be called by his/her derivatives agent to deposit an additional fund to maintain its initial margin within a specified period of time. If the Client does not provide the required margin within the time required by his/her derivatives agent, the Client's position may be liquidated, and the Client will be liable for any resulting loss from such liquidation.

The derivatives agent may also include Forced Close Position as an additional term in a Contract Appointing Derivatives Brokerage or its trading regulation that is when the Client's balance in its margin account drops to the Forced Close Level, the derivatives agent will call the Client to deposit additional margin during trading hours.

If the Client does not provide the required margin within the time set out in the agreement or the regulation, the derivative agent is entitled to close out the Client's position, and the Client will be liable for any resulting loss from such Forced Close Position. Clients who maintain a position in derivatives, whether for their own account or through third party, in excess of the amount determined by the Derivatives Exchange and are unable to offset such excessive position as informed by their derivatives agents will be exposed to the similar foregoing risk.

3.4 Risk Associated with Failure to Offset Position

Should the client be unable to offset its derivatives position before the settlement date due to unfavourable market conditions, e.g. illiquidity, trading halt in the market, and etc, the Client may sustain a loss due to its outstanding position in Derivatives at settlement date.

3.5 Risk Associated with Failure to Execute Stop Loss Order

A derivatives agent may not be able to execute some types of orders, such as 'stop-loss' or 'stop-limit' orders, placed by the Client to limit his/her losses, since market conditions at the time the order is placed may make it impossible to match such orders.

3.6 Risk from Position Restriction or Prohibition

The Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission may order derivatives agents to restrict or prohibit a client from acquiring further position, to close its trading accounts or to liquidate his/her position if the client's derivatives transactions have or may have affected the integrity of derivatives trading in the Derivatives Exchange, or have or may have caused the price of derivatives traded in the Derivatives Exchange to be inconsistent with the normal market condition, or are inappropriate or may violate the law governing derivatives; or if the client fails, upon request of the Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission, to inform or provide information, or gives false or misleading explanation or information to its derivative agent, the Derivatives Exchange, the Clearing House or the Office of Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Office of Securities and Exchange Commission may also order the Derivatives Exchange or the Clearing House to suspend trading or restrict or liquidate position of clients where it is necessary to maintain the stability of the financial and economic system of the country, or to maintain the stability of the trading and settlement system of the derivatives market.
